Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Farms for Soldiers From the hundreds of replies received a number of extracts have been taken and are here appended which give their purport. There have been but two replies which condemned the plan. All the other replies have been in its favor. One of the division commanders, Gen. Hersey, submitted the matter to a vote of his division of 23,363 men stationed on the Rhine. The result of this vote shows that 4,595 men expressed themselves as personally interested in it. Col. F. H. Adams found 245 men in his regiment who were anxious to become identified with this development work. Col. Peyton found in 206 men of the Sixty-first Infantry 98 men who either wanted to know more of the plan or who wished to try it. Brig. Gen. Poore reports that in his brigade out of 7,010 men 1,800 expressed interest in the plan. Col. Stone, at Bourges, France, advises that out of 3,463 man who gathered to consider the matter a total of 789 were interested or vitally interested. Col. Wheeler, at Coblenz, advises that out of 1,480 men 22 percent were interested. Brig. Gen. O Neil took a poll which showed 27 percent of 1,800 men who thought so well of the plan that they intended to investigate it. These figures and others that you will find in the letters show a much larger interest than anyone had heretofore thought obtained among the men, although we have now in this office postal cards and letters from 107,000 men in which they have asked to know what opportunity along this line the Government was extending. I commend for your consideration the...
