Excerpt: .(alike with the side pillars and mantel) of marble with soapstone sides and back, measuring in front four feet in length. So when Sunday came, the day being pleasant and the atmosphere clear, with the wind north-west, and the air of course fully charged with electric elements (all very essential conditions among others, as I have heard Tom R. say, in getting communication from the spirit world), I had a twofoot green upland white-oak log put clean back into my library fireplace. On top of this white-oak log I laid a one-foot six-inch yaller (not yellow) bark oak back stick on top of that. Next I laid on my heavy topped brass hand (not and) irons, which are two and one-half feet long and two feet high, and one foot through: bewitching smelling Rhode Island whitewannut forestick, the reader must pardon me for inserting after...
