Excerpt: .to the revolutions per second as a basis of comparison of dynamos without perceiving its true significance, and have called this ratio the mass factor. The fact seems to have been overlooked that the ratio of the induced volts to the revolutions per second is a constant, so long as the useful. lines per pole remain unaltered, being, in fact, what we have termed the induction factor. While the force factor and the so-called mass factor are one and the same thing, the latter is expressed in a way involving the idea of power and, consequently, of speed, while the former indicates the real nature of this ratio, showing that it is quite independent of speed, and, therefore, not a power unit at all, much less a mass unit, but a force unit. and the resistance of the motor 0.05 ohm; inserting these values in the equation, we find the induction factor to be 4.45, and the running current 130 amperes; the force factor is therefore 578 dynes. If $p=i$, and $A = 200$, there must be 2.22×10^5 lines per pole. Since the pull at the rim of the rope drum is 3,400 pounds, when running at 200 feet per second, this motor would develop about twenty horse-power; and if the elevator had to act always at this speed, it would be sufficient to describe the motor as a twenty-horsepower motor; but this would give no information as to the ability of the motor...
